14/ Teaching goals (program content, subject description)	The Sound Activity Space Studio (PPDD) runs an online course devoted to the nature and workings of sound in the context of space and architecture. At the studio, we shape an

	individual understanding of what sound is and of the reasons why it cannot exist beyond space. We also look for new parameters for sound and space in the new era. We focus on the physicality of sound. We examine the functioning of speech organs. We work on recorded sound: drawn, sculpted, painted, embroidered, etc., treating each of these activities in relation to the creation of sound. Sound – both pure as well as mediated and determined by other media – offers us tools to explore and create architecture. We work with various kinds of spaces and make different realities collide in search of new platforms of speaking and communication. We describe the model and structure of our sound and space activities with verbs: we approach sound, we augment, dissolve, remove, erase, copy, distort, crush sound and throw it out of space. We look for simple solutions, we use widely available tools and perform basic, uncomplicated gestures. By choosing less advanced technologies, we consciously respond to the technological overload of today’s world. We oppose this dominant tendency of the modern-day era. We take our activities outdoors in order to explore the changing meanings of open space and architecture at a time of social isolation due to the pandemic. We look for places that, just like a balcony looking out onto the street, problematise the indoors/outdoors division. We seek new ways of using such spaces. At the studio, we work with voice and the right to speak in physical, social and political contexts. We explore the possibilities and conditions of giving voice and taking it away. We learn to take responsibility for voice. We also speak together as a group. In this way, we look for methods of aural collaboration and co-existence, establishing various connections beyond radio, telephone and online channels. Together we seek creative inspirations, tools and solutions that will give us the power and possibility to influence the world.

14/ Teaching goals (program content, subject description)	The nature of the Studio is oriented towards team and interdisciplinary activities. We believe that activities should gather representatives of various scientific, technological and artistic fields, not only representatives of the art world. We believe that the most important activities are created at the junction of disciplines, avoiding categorizing and segregating. Themes explored in the studio: Thematic areas explored in the Studio are: perception of the user of virtual experience and components constituting the experience including the kinds of illusion, embodiment, proprioception, sense of agency as well as affordances. It is crucial to study the issue of immersion and its level. The thematic range of the work is wide and results from the areas of interest of the Studio at a given time. Currently explored tools are: 360 film, 360 3d film, 3d simulators, gameing engines, spatial and ambisonic sound, 3d modeling, photogrammetry, 3d scanning, simulations, virtual reality and augmented reality. The studio is open to the contemporary use of new media in participatory, community, individual, interactive and multimedia experiences with a focus on the search for original aesthetics - both visual, auditory and interactive. www: www: www.zdarzeniawirtualne.asp.waw.pl fb: www.facebook.com/3dZDARZENIAwirtualne/ ig: www.instagram.com/3dzw2/?hl=pl trendbook digital cultures: www.trendbook.digitalcultures.pl/dyplomujaca-pracownia-3d-i-zdarzen-wirtualnych/
